Pleasant Notice of Dr. Clifton-A

Great Many Other Personals. Due West, S., March 2, 1896.

Thursday, the day of prayer for colleges, was observed here with religous exercises. Rev. J. A. Clitton, D. D., of Abbeville, conducted religious services in the A. R. P. church. The two colleges were out in full force. Dr. Clitton also conducted the services ducted religious services in the X, X, Y, C, enurch. The two colleges were out in full force. Dr. Clifton also conducted the services at the Y. M. C. A. Thursday night. To say that Dr. Clifton completely captured the hearts of our people, but faintly expresses it. Dr. Clifton will be with us again soon. In connection with the services Rev. O. Y. Bonner read from statistics gathered, the percentage of members of colleges all over the State that had professed religion. It was gratifying to our people to know that the large number of students in the two colleges here, but four to our people to know that the large number of students in the two colleges here, but four in Erskine and four in the Duc West Female College are non-communicants. MERITS OF DIFFERENT ROSES.

Prominent Florist Considers Roses fro a Grower's Standpoint.

In a paper on roses, read by Mr. Edwin Lonsdale, of Philadelphia, Pa., at the fourth annual meeting of the Society of American Florists, the following information of practical interest to rose growers was given: American Beauty is perhaps the most remarkable rose on the list. A rose of its size, form and fragrance, and at the same time a perpetual bloomer, is a great stride onward. It was introduced to the American puolic just when the large hybrid perpetual rose had become fashionable, and flower buyers wanted these at all seasons of the year. American Beauty is obtainable from January to September. It will stand much heat and moisture when in good health, and seems to do better the third year after planting out than the first. The plan of bending down the shoots seems to be the best for this rose. It causes flowering shoots to break from the base which generally produce fine blooms.

No rose ever created so much attention in this country as the William F. Bennett. It has been one of the most valuable roses introduced into our list of winter blooming sorts for a number of years. It is a hard rose to get started on account of its free blooming tendency, but by persistent disbudding, when planted no more than three or four inches deep in rich, light soil on a well drained table, it is one of the most profitable varieties grown. It requires more heat than most of the teas, and seems to improve in constitution each vear.

Catherine Mermet commands the admiration of every one who sees it. Its delicate coloring, fragrance and exquisite form have made it a deserved favorite. Unfortunately everybody cannot grow it profitably. It requires special treatment to bring out its paying qualities, and is very much inclined to run to blind wood if grown in too light a soil. It prefers a rather stiff, though porous, soil, for no rose is more impatient of excessive moisture at the roots, and a night temperature of not higher than 55 degs. produces the finest flowers.

The Bride is a sprout from the last named variety, being identical with it, excepting in color, which is white. It has estab-lished itself as one of the best white roses we have. Of course, it does not compare with the Puritan when at its best, nor with Niphetos for productiveness, but it can generally be depended upon to bring a fair price when delivered in good condition. It has almost entirely displaced Cornelia Cook, and will hold its own for some time to come. Niphetos, it has been said, will be grown when all the white roses now in cultivation have been forgotten. This is perhaps going a little too far, but it goes to show in what esteem this rose is held. Much was hoped from the Puritan, and these hopes had some foundation, but experience has demonstrated that the majority of the many buds formed produce imperfect blossoms. After the experience of last winter it cannot be placed on the list of roses likely to prove profitable. The ad-vent of the now somewhat old and famous Perle des Jardins marked a new era in rose culture. It will be a long time be-fore the Perle is superseded, and, for general purposes, it remains one of the best we have. However, it is true that some of our very best growers do not find it profitable, because of so many flowers coming malformed. It is believed by some florists to require a more porous soil than most varieties do, and a night temperature of from 60 to 65 degs. Papa Gontier has not been in general cultivation sufficiently long for all growers to learn its requirements thoroughly or to bring out its good qualities. That it has established itself as a favorite among flower buyers there is no doubt. Its long stems and good foliage would give it high rank, even if its fine color were not so desirable. The tendency to lose its leaves in winter, however, is against it, and if this tendency can be overcome it must be considered a first class variety.

La France bounded into popular favor tability for forcing must have been discovered about the time Mr. Bennett's Hybrid Teas were introduced, to which class La France undoubtedly belongs. It is a great favorite with all flower lovers, and, generally speaking, profitable to the grower.

Bon Silene is a very old favorite, and is still one of the most profitable varieties in many localities. Its fresh pink color and ideal shape commends it to all flower lovers, and its productiveness will keep it on the list for some time to come.

Take Care of the Carriage. The safest way to guard against blisters on panels and the cracking of the varnish on carriages is to be careful about how the vehicle is subjected to either rain or heat. If caught in a shower, have a chamois skin with you; it will not take very long to dry the surface off, and then you are sure you are running no risks. If compelled to stand any length of time in the sun, turn the carriage around once in a while, so as to allow the sides to cool alternately. Never allow the carriage to stand in the coach house near a window, unless you have a cover for the exposed parts or curtains on the windows, and above all do not cool your carriage off, too suddenly while it is heated, by dashing water over it in that condition; let it cool off gradually by standing in a shady place, or at least until you can bear your hand on it without almost burning it. The reason is that the varnish and paint are softened up so that the sudden reaction will be very likely to cause them to crack, if not to flake off altogether. Water should never be allowed to dry on a carriage, either by the action of the sun or atmosphere, but should be dried off with chamois. Things Worth Knowing. The dust bath is the toilet of the hen. Keep tools handy and in good condition. A ration of equal parts bran and corn meal is good for the growing hogs. Georgia farmers cultivate the Spanish peanut extensively as food for hogs. Sheep are better scavengers for small, unripe, wormy apples than swire are, it

It is claimed that every year sees an increase in the number of farmers who pick corn for seed as soon as it is glazed. A good top dressing of manuro on the little knolls and poor spots of the field after winter grain is sown will have a fine effect. Wash dairy utensils, pans, pails and vats carefully with cold water, in which is a little salt or soda; then rinse, and thoroughly scald with hot water.

French farmers report very beneficial as a manure on strawberries, pears, lettuce, peas, beans, carrots and vines.

Question 4. Please state how you treat the potatoes to be used for late planting, after digging the early crop, what size you use and whether cut or uncut?

To this question the majority answer that they simply spread them out in the shade until the planting time, while a few have adopted the bedding plan. About one-half the answers recommend cutting the seed potatoes. I observe, too, that those who do not bed their potatoes and who cut them are the ones who complain most of the difficulty in getting a stand of late potatoes. Nearly all use the culls, or small, unmarketable potatoes from the early crop; but it is worth noticeing that those who have grown the home seed for the longest time without change usually consider it essential to select good-sized, smooth potatoes for planting the late crop.

Question 5. What date do you plan the second crop? The answers to this vary with the latitude of the growers from the last of July in Virginia to September in Florida. Our own experience shows ugustus M. Robinson, John R. Mobley, James S. Robinson, John A. Ransom and that, for this part of North Carolina, Samuel E. Bowan, Partners as A. M. Robthe middle of August is the best time although, fair crops have been raised from September planting. But these very late ones are apt to be cut down by frost in an immature state.

The vote was as NOETHBOUND. follows: Twenty-one growers name Early Rose; six name Bliss' Triumph; three name Early Ohio; two name Pearl of Savoy; two name Crown Jewels; two name Lee's Favorite, and one each prefer Virginia Red, Beauty of Hebron, Polaris and Clarke's No. 1. It will be seen, then, that the Early Rose is far from being superseded yet. Question 9. What do you consider the best methods of storing for winter
